Can I work on more than one habit at the same time?

You can only work on one habit at a time. Research shows that focusing on one singular habit will increase your chances of success!

What if I want to change my habit?

We are all about choice, so if you find that you didn't pick the right habit, we encourage you to try a new one! Our coaches are happy to assist you with any endeavor you wish to pursue. If they know another coach might be a better fit for the new habit you are trying to work on, they'll refer you. And if you change your mind later and want to go back to the earlier habit, you can.

Why 12 weeks?

LifeDojo is science-based, and research shows that 12 weeks is a sweet spot for building a new habit and making your new habit automatic. This amount of time allows you to think less about your habit as it comes more naturally and is integrated into your life.

Is the program available after the initial 12 weeks?

Yes! After you've worked on a habit for 12 weeks you are able to try a new habit!

What happens after 12 weeks?

After 12 weeks, your habit program ends and you are able to start a new habit.

Who are your coaches?

LifeDojo coaches are selected from diverse backgrounds to meet the unique needs of clients. All coaches have specialized training in the health field. Coach backgrounds include masters-level trained psychologists and social workers, registered dietitians, personal trainers, certified health coaches, and more. Many of our coaches have a combination of backgrounds that allow them to provide personalized, research-informed coaching. Coaches are located all over the globe and clients can choose from a variety of coaches when joining the program to ensure the best fit for their needs.

Is coaching available in my local language?

LifeDojo coaching services are currently only offered in English and Japanese.

Do I have to work with a coach?

Our program is completely choice-based; you can choose your habit and your coach. Whether or not you choose to work with a coach is completely up to you. However, we have found that those who work with a coach do tend to be more successful than those who do not.

How much does coaching cost?

Expert coaching is included in your LifeDojo program at no cost to you! Though it is optional, users who choose to engage with their coach regularly are typically the most successful with the program and with achieving long-term positive behavior change.

What is the best way to contact a coach?

Our talented coaches can be reached through 1:1 chat messages through the app, 15-minute weekly phone sessions, or through group chat. You choose what works best for you. Some clients enjoy having a 15-minute call every week to explore their progress in depth, ask questions, and have someone help them stick to their habit. Some clients prefer chatting with their coach within the app or online, asking questions and sharing updates whenever they choose. Others prefer the community feel offered by chat groups, which include a coach. Groups are a great way to connect with others who are implementing new healthy habits just like you. It is a way to share challenges and successes, learn how your coworkers are using the program, and get advice from your colleagues as well as a coach who moderates and facilitates the discussions.

Is coaching confidential?

All coaching interactions are confidential. Your name and any other identifying details about you will not be shared.

What if I want to change my coach?

Our whole offering is based on choice. We encourage you to find the right coach for you, and hopefully grow and develop a relationship with them throughout the program. You might form a relationship with one coach for physical exercise, but another for meditation. You're free to switch back and forth depending on the habit you're working on.

What are group chats?

Group chats are an opt-in function of our application. Some clients are more successful when they know other colleagues are working on similar habits. Sometimes this creates a playful, competitive environment, sometimes this creates a serious, reinforcing environment. Our coaches gently guide the conversation toward the most productive route.

How long are phone sessions and what is typically discussed?

Phone sessions are 15 minutes long. During your sessions, your coach can help you reflect on how to create an environment to optimize success, build ways to hold yourself accountable, explore motivation and desired impact, or simply answer questions along the way. You can learn more about health, wellness, behavior change, or get objective input on things you're going through at work or home.

Can my spouse/family participate in LifeDojo?

LifeDojo is currently available to all Adobe regular and paid temp employees in Australia, Singapore, New Zealand, Hong Kong and Japan at this time.

How often do I receive notifications from the app?

We have push notification settings within the application that you can customize. By default, you get notifications every time your coach sends you a message or there is new content for your habit selection. You can turn this on or off as desired. We also send a reminder email if a message hasn't been replied to in a while (to help keep you on track), but this can also be disabled.

How is my data used with LifeDojo?

LifeDojo uses your deidentified survey data and activity to assess the impact of the program and to make sure our users are getting the most out of it.

Can I use my own email address?

No, the program requires you to log-in via Okta's SSO using your Adobe email credentials.

Who do I contact if I am having trouble?

We're sorry to hear you're experiencing issues! Please reach out to support@lifedojo.com and we will get back to you within 2-3 business days.
